

Announcing the Appian World 2018 Online Hackathon

February 26, 2018

Low-code platform hackathon judges include Apple co-founder Steve Wozniak, development influencer Alan Shimmel, and Forrester analyst John Rymer

RESTON, Va., Feb. 26, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Appian (NASDAQ:APPN) is offering up to $10,000 for the winning projects in the Appian World 2018 Hackathon. The online Hackathon, open now and accepting submissions through March 27, will showcase the effectiveness of low-code development for business applications. Participants are not required to be Appian customers.

Finalists will be invited to attend Appian World in Miami, Florida from April 23-25 where they will demo in-person to an all-star panel of judges, including Apple co-founder Steve Wozniak. First, Second, and Third place winners will be announced from the main stage of the conference.

To register for the Hackathon, visit <https://appian.devpost.com/>. In order to be considered, include a demo video (hosted on YouTube, Vimeo, or Youku). This should incorporate a step-by-step visual demo, and additionally, a way to access your working application for judging and testing.

The top-three Hackathon winners will receive the following:

- First Place
  - $5,000 cash and four free passes to Appian World 2019
  - Appian deluxe promotion:
