

Appian World 2019 Hackathon is Now Open

February 25, 2019

Low-code hackathon judges include Black Girls Code Founder and CEO, Kimberly Bryant and Neil Ward-Dutton, IDC's VP, AI and DX European Research Practices

RESTON Va., Feb. 25, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Appian (NASDAQ: APPN) is offering up to $10,000 for the winning projects in the Appian World 2019 Hackathon. The annual online Hackathon will showcase the effectiveness of Appian's low-code platform for quickly building impactful business applications. Submissions are being accepted through April 15, and participants are not required to be Appian customers.

Finalists will be invited to attend Appian World in San Diego, CA from May 13-15 where they will demo in-person to an all-star panel of judges, and winners will be announced from the main stage of the conference.

To register for the Hackathon, visit <https://appian.devpost.com/>. In order to be considered, include a demo video (hosted on YouTube, Vimeo, or Youku). This should incorporate a step-by-step visual demo, and additionally, a way to access your working application for judging and testing.
